St. Louis Country Day School

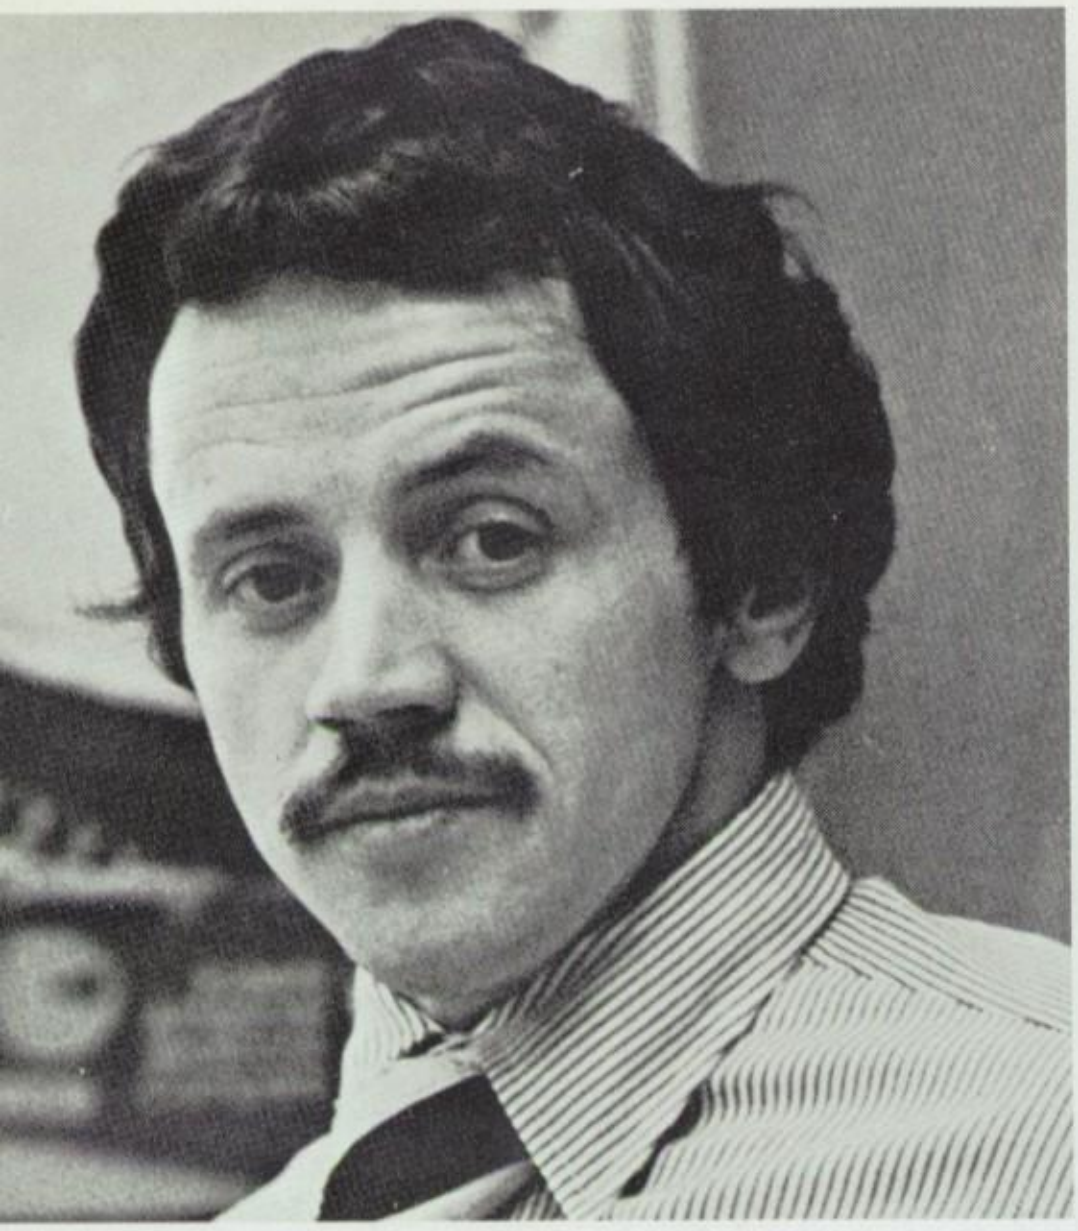
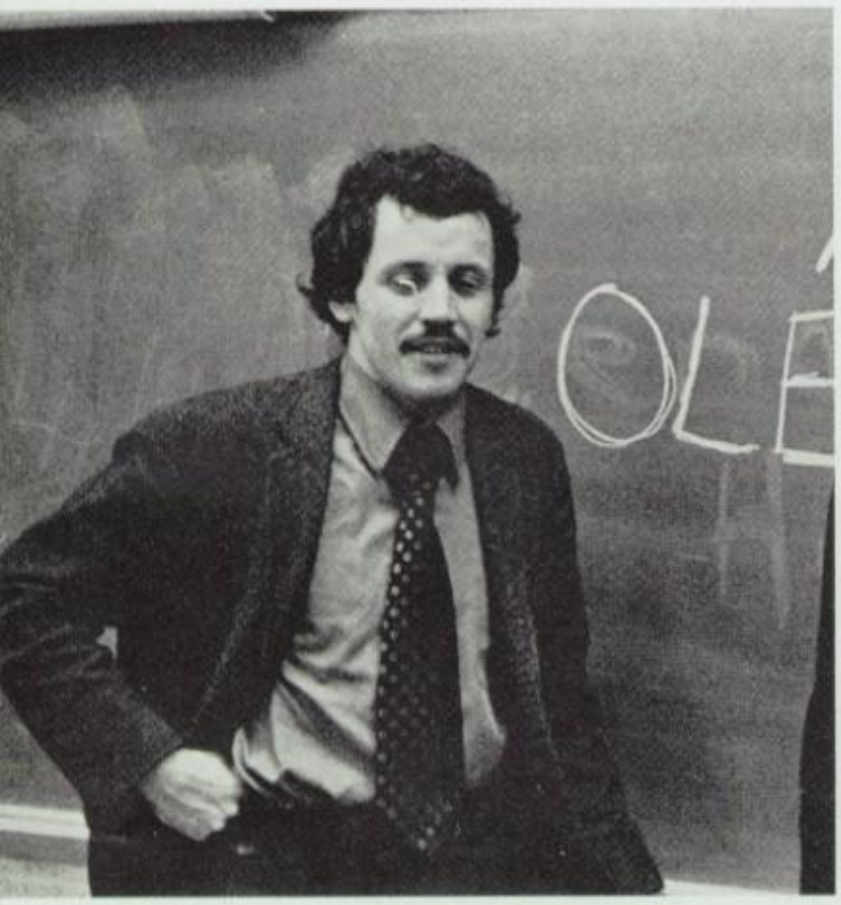
The 1976 CODASCO staff takes great pleasure in dedicating this year's edition to Michael Hurley. Mr. Hurley's official occupation was as a Spanish teacher, but as everyone at the school who was close to him realizes, the man did much more than just his job. Taking part in many extracurricular activities, Mr. Hurley proved himself a capable leader of young men.

Some of Mr. Hurleys contributions include directing the Career Awareness program, coaching soccer and tennis, organizing several student trips to Mexico, and being faculty advisor to both the Foreign Language Literary Review and the Symposium.

Mr. Hurley epitomizes the spirit of Country Day in that he combines academic, athletic, and extracurricular pursuits, which in total make a fully rounded education.



SEÑOR



FROM THE HEADMASTERS DESK

To echo a theme I touched on during graduation, it is true that the end of each year, though a cause for some slight and fatigued relief, is really a moment of sadness for me. Each year is distinctive, and yours has been no exception. In an age which cynically justifies withdrawal from the community because of the problems of the society, the Class of 1976 has, as much as any group of young men I have known, approached the society and its problems with openness and, most important, a willingness to become involved. A sign of that is the deep concern many of you have expressed consciously when you avoided becoming involved. You know when you have goofed — and it has bothered you enough that the chances are pretty good you won't make the same mistake again.

Examples of your commitment to the community through personal involvement abound in the pages of this Yearbook, itself a fine example of a good sense and taste. As I was thinking about this little piece this morning on my way to work, I heard a short special decrying the exodus from Congress in this election year, men who are not returning to the national legislature largely because the problems are overwhelming. On the one hand, it is tough not to sympathize and agree with them; on the other hand it is easy to wonder if these men, some of whom have been very positively constructive in their careers, haven't given in to their selfindulgence, the pre-occupation with one's own pleasure which has been so prevelant in society in the past few years.

When I worry too much about that, I turn to the Class of 1976 and, based on their example, realize that the selfishness of our social and political lives of the last decade could well be about to end. I mean that. Our future as a nation is in good hands, indeed. Your School is proud to have had a hand in your development as mature and responsible citizens, not afraid to do their best for the betterment of others. Good luck and Godspeed.
